5

10

ABSTRACT

An instrument for providing illumination intraocular tissue during surgery generally includes a hand held light source which includes a light emitting diode, a power source for driving the diode and a control switch for interconnecting the diode with the power source. At least fiber optic having a proximal end light one in communication with the LED and a distal end size for insertion into an eye for illumination of intraocular tissue is provided.